Crew

Rob Foxell - Captain

Rob is from Dorset in the UK, and has grown up sailing dinghies from a young age. He raced competitively through school and university, while working at his local marinas during his holidays. He has been working full time on yachts for seven years, five of which were spent on the J Class yacht Hanuman, cruising and racing in New England, the Caribbean and the Mediterranean. When not sailing, Rob enjoys spending his time travelling, kitesurfing or up in the mountains.

Jennie Darbyshire – Chef/stew

Jennie grew up in the coastal town of Falmouth in the UK, so has never been far from the sea. From a young age, she raced dingies and keel boats with father and brother, as well as cruising around the South of England on her families boat. She has a degree in Silversmithing and Goldsmithing, and worked for a professional jeweler for two years after graduating. However, the call of the sea proved too much, so the yachting industry has been her home for the past five years, four of which were spent on the 140' Ketch Rebecca. As a result of the active lifestyle onboard, Jennie loves to find delicious fresh ingredients from wherever the yacht is based, cooking up healthy and energizing meals for both guests and crew.

Daniel Marks – Mate/Engineer

Dan is from Devon, UK. Growing up near the coast, sailing is in his nature. Whilst attending college, where he studied politics and engineering, Dan discovered his love for the water spending the majority of his weekends and family holidays sailing the south coast of England. After leaving college he worked at a wine merchant for 6 years, achieving his wine tasting certifications, before making what seemed like the obvious move into yachting. When not in the engine bay, Dan is indulging in his passions, travelling, watching the rugby or the wines of the world
